Abstract: Business organizations are aware of managers’ strategic value and the importance of providing them with continuous training. For this reason, to the extent of their needs, they require training techniques that can really change their managing skills. Seemingly working in this direction, executive coaching is a tool for managerial development that is becoming increasingly successful in the business world. This study presents an analysis on the situation of and the last innovations in executive coaching.

Agote Errazquin, Laida (Univ. de Deusto. Camino de Mundaiz, 50. 20012 Donostia): Authentic leadership, trust and followers’ emotions: the experience of HRMs during organizational change processes (Orig. en)

Abstract: Despite the increasing interest, antecedents of emotions in organizational change contexts are still under-researched. In an attempt to contribute to literature, we analyzed the experience of 102 Spanish HRMs using structural equation modeling based on partial least squares. Findings show that authentic leadership influences followers’ trust and positive emotions. Additionally, trust mediates the relation between authentic leadership and negative emotions.
